

TBS urged to strengthen public education in rural areas

public education in rural areas

The National Bureau of Statistics (NBS) has urged the government to strengthen public education in rural areas. The NBS, in a report, said that the government should focus on providing quality education to all citizens, especially in rural areas where access to education is still a challenge.

The NBS also noted that the government should invest in infrastructure, particularly in roads and electricity, to improve access to education in rural areas. It also urged the government to provide more scholarships and financial aid to students in rural areas.

The NBS further stated that the government should focus on improving the quality of teachers and staff in rural schools. It also urged the government to provide more training and professional development opportunities for teachers in rural areas.

The NBS also noted that the government should focus on providing more vocational and technical education in rural areas. It also urged the government to provide more training and professional development opportunities for students in rural areas.

The NBS also noted that the government should focus on providing more health and nutrition services in rural areas. It also urged the government to provide more training and professional development opportunities for health workers in rural areas.